WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

*** Hot, Dry, and Windy Eastern Bay Area Today and Tuesday *****

High pressure near the 4-Corners area will be a bit weaker through Wednesday as a low pressure trough sits over the Northern CA, OR, and WA. Inland temperatures will be closer to normal throughout the North Ops region and humidity and SW-NW winds will increase a bit. SW-W winds in northern and eastern areas will be 10-20 mph with gusts to 25-30 mph for a few hours this afternoon, then return at lighter speeds Tuesday and Wednesday. Some mid-level cloud development is possible in far northwestern areas due to the trough. There is a remote chance of a shower or thunderstorm each day through Wednesday near the OR state line.

In coastal areas, very dry and warm air remains in place above the marine layer (1300-1700 ft), and westerly winds will gust to 25-30 mph this afternoon and evening in the eastern Bay Area. RH will be 12-25% there today, then recover to 30-40% tonight, and likely remain above 20% tomorrow as the westerly winds return.

In Del Norte County dry NE winds will gust to 25-30 mph over the higher terrain off and on through Wednesday morning.

The high will build back over the Great Basin late in the week and bring a return to very hot and dry weather. There will be a slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms in far southeastern areas each day, with increasing chances and coverage along with hotter temperatures next weekend.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

***Scattered thunderstorms mainly over the mountains and deserts today*****

Abundant moisture in the atmosphere will keep scattered showers and thunderstorms going over the mountains and deserts through this afternoon. Isolated showers and thunderstorms will also be possible across some coastal and valley areas through this afternoon. The flow aloft will become southwest Tuesday ending the shower and thunderstorm threat across most of the region, but isolated afternoon showers and thunderstorms will continue over the Sierra. Temperatures will cool a couple of degrees each day through Wednesday as high pressure over the Four Corners Area weakens and shifts east. Maximum temperatures will be in the 80s to low 90s across the mountains and 90s to 105 in the valley today. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 15% and 30% through the end of this week. High pressure will strengthen and shift west bringing a warming trend Thursday through this weekend. East to southeast flow aloft will bring an increase in shower and thunderstorm activity Friday through this weekend. Showers and thunderstorms may affect the coastal and valley locations this weekend. Westerly winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph will surface across the wind prone desert areas each afternoon and evening through Thursday.
